Large Concourse of Sorrowing People.

The day dawned, yesterday, as best it could beneath a sky black and frowning with clouds which sent down, hardly without intermission during the day, floods of rain. Nature sympathized with man, and put on sackcloth and bathed the earth with tears, in mourning the loss of the distinguished man whose mortal remains were to be committed to the grave. Owing to the forbidding state of the weather, the order of exercises was somewhat varied, and hundreds were not able to be in attendance because of the impossibility of procuring carriages. The city wore a solemn aspect, and the streets were hushed. Figgs at war rious points drooped at half-mast. Business was entirely suspended, out of respect to the memory of the decessed, About half-past ten o'clock, Governor Charles Anderson and staff, accompanied by the following noted men of the State, took carriages and proceeded to theresidence of she late Governor No. 318 proposed to the following noted men of the State, took carriages and proceeded to theresidence of she late Governor No. 318 promoted to the grave on the following noted men of the State, took carriages and proceeded to theresidence of she late Governor No. 318 promoted at teast.

lowed by the Mayor of Cleveland, City Council and other city officers, all in cariages. About half past eleven religious services were commenced. They were conducted by several of the pasters of the cisy, in the hall of the residence of the deceas-ed. Rev. E S. Gillett, of the M. E. Church, read a number of appropriate passages from the Scriptures, after which Rev. M. A. Hoge, of the Presbyterian Church, made the following remarks, which were listened to with profound attention by all present: ADDRESS OF REV. M. A. HOGE.

We stand to-day in the presence of Death, that great leveller, who, by his impartial stroke, teaches us the needful lesson of our commen humanity—high and low, rich and poor, bond and free, and of our comnon inheritance of a nature subject to frailty and suffering. In one view, this is but an ordinary event, since every hour witnesses the de-parture of one or more of our fellow mortals from the scenes of earth to those of an untried world. And as Christians we bow submissively to the decree which calls away our friends, accepting the Apostle's solution of the mystery of death, that "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death hath passed upon all, for that all have sinned." Under the government of the All-Wise and in-finitely just Ruler, the infliction of the penalty is positive proof of guiltiness on the part of the suilerer. Subjection to the common lot of mortality is evidence also of involvement in a common nature of sin. Human tribunals may err in the infliction Acquiescing, therefore, in the little in the crimes someonee, we find our comfort in the further Apostolic reveiation, that "as death hath Apostolic reveisation, that "as death and reigned by one, even so doth life reign by One—Jesus Christ." For the counterpoise of this state of sin and disorder and suffering, we look to a state of holiness and joy to be revealed hereafter, when the Great Restorer—who is the Resurrection and the Life—shall reign in righteousness forever. But in another view, the occasion is one of more than ordinary interest. We bear away to his burying to day, the honored remains of the Cuief Magistrate of the State. Remembering the Republican simplicity of his tastes and habits, it is with as its forms and passantry as may be: plicity of his tastes and habits, it is with as ittle of pomp and pageantry as may be; yet the presence of this concourse of people and of these officials of the State and Nation attests the wide-spread relations of the honored dead, personal and public, of friendship and of duty. And the tribute itself of the property that a tribute itself of the property that the prop yielded is not only that given to personal merit, but that with which a grateful na-tion crowns official fidelity. This is not the time for more than the

This is not the time for more than the briefest allusion to the public services of Mr. Brough. In former years he mingled much in political life, and served his State in offices of the greatest responsibility, and always with such fidelity and success as to secure the highest meed of public approbation. But it is the stand he so promptly took with regard to the great national crisis through which we have just passed and the devotion of his unusual powers of mind and heart to the work of saving the country and heart to the work of saving the country and chosen instruments, in the hand of Provi-dence, and one of the most efficient, too, in winning the victory for the National cause. It is worthy of notice that those by whom it has pleased God to lead us on to success, have not been the men who, by special culresidences of our citizens, and exhibit this choice work of art, and take subscriptions therefor. The picture, when seen, will plead for itself.

A Man Killed-Another Fatal Whinkerment. They have been men for the most part refore unknown to fame, and possessing but little of what the world would call culture or greatness, but at the same tion of whisky,—an affair which is a disgrace to the city. A man named John Divine, who keeps a low doggery at No. 5 St. Clair street hill, went into the saloon of John Smith on Union Lane, about four o'clock Thursday afternoon, where he met Thomas Gilmartin, a saloon-keeper on River street. The latter was intexicated and is ordinarily the strength of the good that his house, a few rods distant. He went immediately to bed, from which he never raised himself. He died at half-past four o'cleck yesterday morning.

Coroner Prentice held an inquest on the body yesterday afternoon. Doctors Strong and Armstrong made a post mortem exam-which underlie our system. In this whole struggle God has taught us that integrity, intelligence and religion must characterise both rulers and people, if we would pre-serve our institutions against the machina-tions of evil-minded men.

Mr. Brough was in intimate sympathy brain and in its substance. Several pints of blood had cored out of the torn vessel, and cosgulated.

The jury, after mature consideration of the case, returned the following verdict:

"Decessed came to his death from a fall, country.

This is the first time, if I am rightly informed, that the State of Ohio has been called to follow to the grave its Chief Executive officer. These are the tears of a great Commonwealth which fall to-day upon the learned for the dead, in the presence of the direction of the dire the uncovered and hushed assemblage. In regard to the personal character and private life of one so well known, it is not necessary that I should speak in detail. No one who has been engaged in public, especially in political, life, may expect to escape the detraction and calumnies of the evil minded, and the misapprehensions of the good. And Mr. Brough has been no exception to the general rule.

This man, of the 24th ult. He says the murdered man's name was Geiger, hailing from Wheeling, early religious instruction, and for the greater part of his life a habitual attendant on the means of grace, but still not wholly West Virginia. Geiger sat beside Kelley in a car from Wellsville to Pittsburgh, and told him he was about to buy a stallion of a man in Sewickly, for $500, Geiger pointed out to Kelley two men on the train, who were following him, and who gave their names as Auderson, brothers. Efforts are being made to arrest these men.
